

Project Management

The Rhead Group provides a full complement of project management services for government and private clients running major construction projects in the oil, gas, electricity, power generation, rail, highway, air, maritime, nuclear and defence sectors in the UK and overseas.

With over 25 years' experience in this field, the project management team provides all the necessary technical expertise and support essential for the effective delivery of well planned, fully compliant and cost effectively managed projects irrespective of the technical complexity and prevailing legislative requirements in the regions involved.

The Rhead Group recognises that having, and being able to demonstrate, competent staff is a key client requirement as well as a legal obligation. Accordingly, the Rhead Group has in place a robust competency and capability assessment process for team members across all functions.

Within the technical disciplines supporting the project management teams this process is particularly stringent ensuring technical and operational staff are not only highly capable, but are also kept abreast of the latest legislation and industry specific requirements through a regular re-evaluation and training register.

The team is made up of engineers and technical experts highly skilled in the array of professional disciplines (e.g. mechanical, civil, electrical, instrumentation, cathodic protection, rotating machinery etc), essential for the assured delivery of robust projects. Within each discipline the Rhead Group can offer clients differing levels of expertise to suit the solution they require, as appropriate to their project, team or budget needs, for example:

- Chartered engineers
- Vocationally qualified engineers

- Project managers
- Design coordinators
- Project supervisors
- Assistant project supervisors
- Document controllers
- Technical clerks.

Employing this enviable pool of mixed discipline/industry expertise, coupled with academic and vocational qualifications, enables the Rhead Group to provide our clients with the most 'value for money' technical solution to meet the project specific requirements.

Through 25 years' experience, the Rhead Group has continuously delivered complex projects to our clients' satisfaction. The 'can do' attitude exhibited by the entire group is entrenched throughout the technical teams supporting our project management function. Our project managers, engineers, and supervisors pride themselves on 'making things happen' and delivering our clients' projects on time, on cost and to the correct quality standards.