New Divisional Director Appointed at Rhead Group

The Rhead Group is pleased to announce the appointment of Lee Foster as Divisional Director, heading up the Rhead Group Power Generation Division, with immediate effect.

Lee brings to the Group a wealth of experience gained from a background in managing large and complex programmes both in the UK and internationally. His diverse knowledge and expertise include project management for subsea pipe laying and offshore support, nuclear submarines, refinery and plant shutdown, waste treatment works and semi-submersible oil drilling.

His previous employment was with BAE Systems Submarine Solutions as Head of Programming, where he was responsible for managing the design, engineering, manufacturing, production, system testing and commissioning for the complete new build section of the Royal Navy's future aircraft carrier programme. The entire programme was valued at approximately £4 billion.

Lee commented: "I am delighted to be joining Rhead Group at this exciting time. Its international portfolio is growing exponentially, with a variety of new projects underway. The company is accessing new global markets and sectors with the support of a first-class team."

Andrew Ferguson, Managing Director, Rhead Group, added: "Lee will be a valuable addition to the team, his excellent knowledge and experience within related industries will contribute to our continued growth. Based in our Bolton office, Lee will be responsible for the targeted growth that will focus on developing our services across the renewable energy, waste to energy and nuclear programmes of works.

"We are delighted to welcome him to the team and wish him every success in what will be a rewarding career with the Group."
